STATINTL

No Snow Forecast,

Washington will be spared somewhat heavier amounts the 1500 block of H St. NW, load of snow in the near future, Tuesday. the weatherman says, but the snow removal and harried resi- residential ones, were passable dents in the suburbs will continue tonight and tomorrow.

snow brought the total in this lane in each direction. area to 22.

The latest forecast for the area predicts partly cloudy weather with temperatures in the lower 20s tonight, and fair and cold tomorrow with temperatures in the lower 30s.

Warn of Jams

The Weather Bureau's fiveday forecast through next of snow clearance. Wednesday said temperatures should average six to eight detended the District, Falls Church and grees below the normal highs Alexandria, but remained closed and lows of 45 and 29, with lit-in Montgomery, Prince Georges, tle day-to-day change. Preci-Fairfax and Arlington counties. pitation may average less than All area universities were open four-tenths of an inch, except today.

any addition to its monumental near the coast about Monday or police said.

District police this morning reported some slow going in the city, but no major tieups.

Crews worked through the night clearing the principal access routes to the District to prevent traffic ticups where the roads were narrowed because

Public schools were open in

Two Deaths Reported

Two more storm-connected police said.

The victim, identified as Wil-District officials reported that liam Walker, or no fixed adcold spell which has hampered most of the city's roads, even dress, was a double amputee, with his left leg missing above this morning, but warned of the knee and his right foot amtraffic jams because many four- putated above the toes. He was Two more deaths from the lane roads were open only one pronounced dead at the D.C. Morgue at 7:15 p.m. Police said he apparently died of exposure. A workman had seen him go into early morning traffic into the the building on Friday, police reported.

Fairfax County Police reported that William I. Prather, 37, of 2317 Trott Ave., Vienna, an employe of the Central Intelligence Agency, was dead on arrival at Fairfax Hospital yesterday morning.

Had Pushed Cars

Police said Prather died of a heart attack after complaining Wednesday of a pain in his right arm. On Tuesday Prather had helped to push cars out of snow-drifts on Vale Road near Vienna, Stores in the District and the deaths were reported, one in suburbs reported stocks up to the District and one in Vienna, near-normal levels, but shoppers Va.

A 65-year-old man was discovered yesterday almost compushed up by the plows, and pletely buried in snow in front deep puddles of slush caused of a vacant building that used by temperatures as high as 37 to house the Cosmos Club, in degrees yesterday afternoon.